PROFILE

I started my studies in Geology/Biology, where the evolution of human behaviour was always the most interesting area for me. This led me to the Cognitive Science master's degree that I'm currently attending. In parallel, knowing the world is evolving based on Technology, I wanted to discover more about how software should be built, to delight humans while bringing us additional value and return. I then decided I wanted to specialize in software construction, crossing my studies with a practical training focused on web development, specifically on the front-end.
